Installing lights at Passmore Reserve would greatly enhance the opportunity for young people and adults to participate in more physical activity. This investment, along with all other monies spent on facilities that improve people's social, emotional and physical health, will later down the track save governments at all levels a far greater amount in the reduced demands on health services for mental and physical illhealth.

I am sure the residents will complain about lights on and noise at nights, but this is a very selfish and short-term view and not in the best interest of the wider community.
