Wildlife Corridors are important for many of our wildlife to survive. Fragmented habitat can prevent animal from accessing seasonal food, shelter and/or breeding partners. Without these important resources species vanish. Speciation can also occur as populations can't cross interbreed; this process often leads to genetic bottlenecks that lead to vulnerability from disease and other factors. Use you power wisely and choose the survival of Australias unique wildlife over immediate profits; tourism is a profit, unique wildlife is a tourist drawcard.
