Some idea of the extent of holes up the trunk

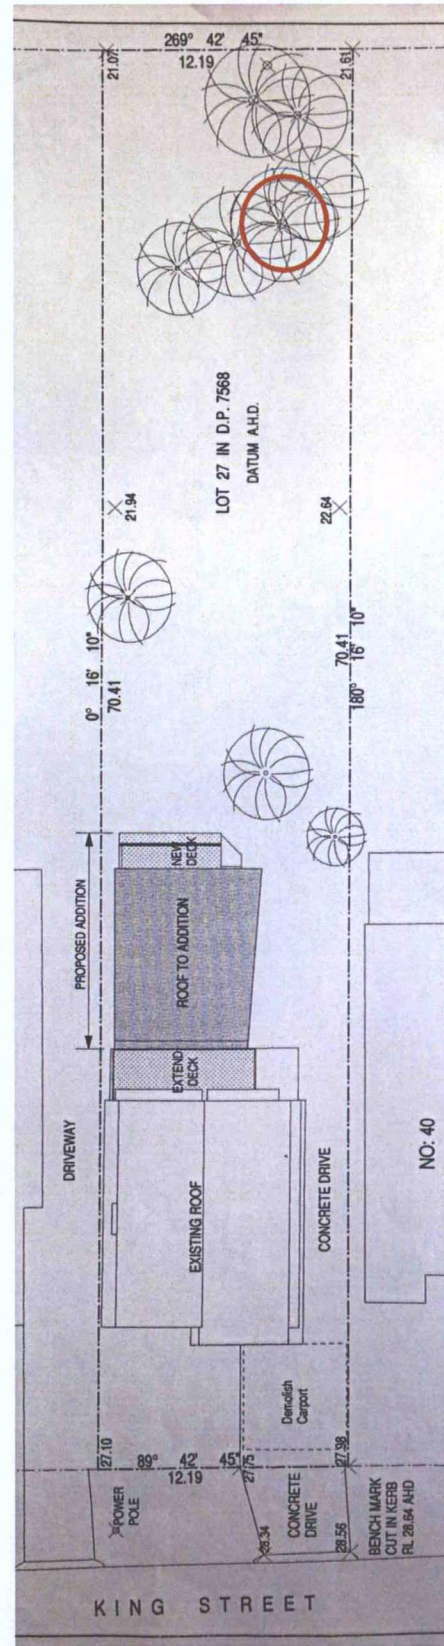

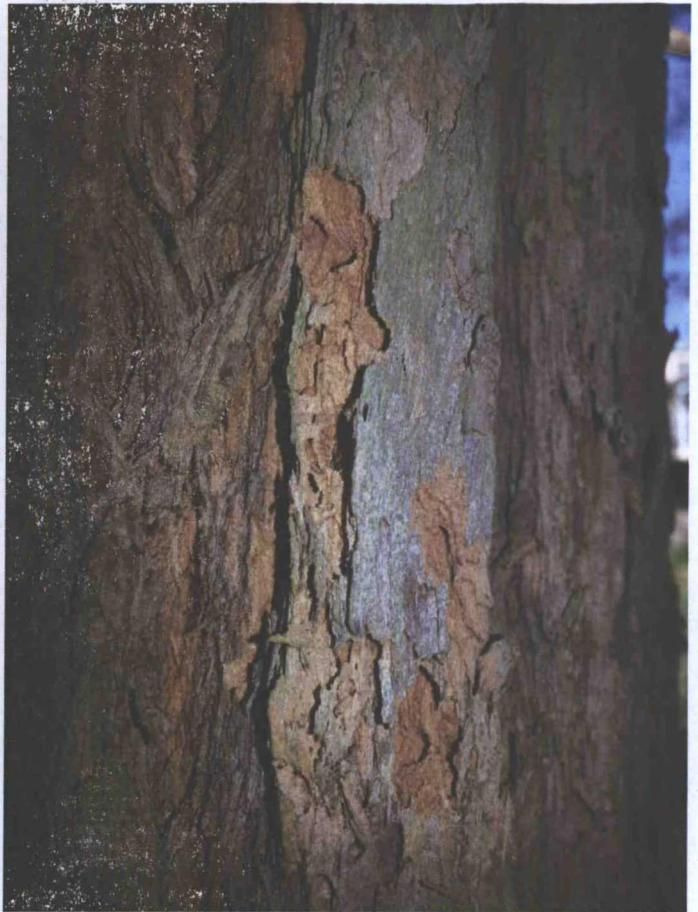

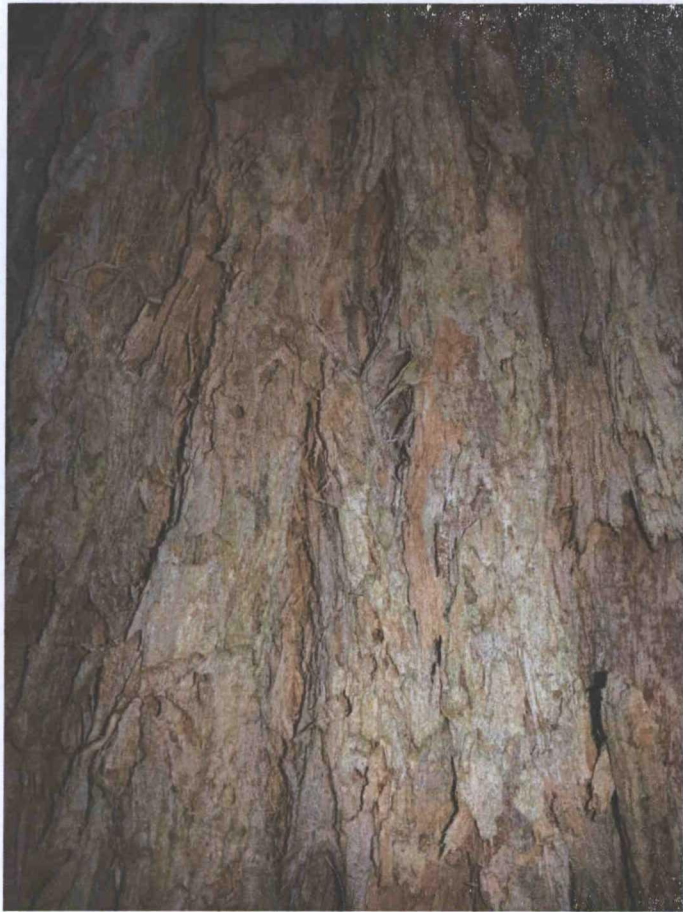

It is with some reluctance we request the removal of one of our magnificent trees. We think it may be a Tallowwood (Eucalyptus microcorys) up to 40 years old (it was a mature tree in 1989). In recent years the tree has become infested with some kind of boring insect.

The red arrow identifies the tree, the red circle shows its approximate location on a plan of the block

The trunk is covered in holes approx 5mm across and are evident up to 4m (as far as is easily visible from the ground). The base of the tree is littered with wood grounds. Our fear is that if the infestation is not removed, it will eventually kill the tree, and the pest may spread to other trees (currently not showing signs of infestation).

Wood grounds accumulating around the base of the tree.
